

Volcanic Condition of the Moon.

We find the following very interesting statement in the "London Star" Parts correspondence:

"There is some talk just now in the scientific world here about a strange observation made at A-en during the total eclipse of August 18th last. It appears that M. D. Craty, the observer, though prevented by the state of weather from seeing the protuberances of the sun, discovered three on the moon, which no one ever dreamt of. They were of a triangular shape, and attached to the moon's limb by their bases; they are further described as being fainter than the body of our satellite, and resembling mountains tipped with sunlight, or also masses of molten metal. They stood very nearly in contact with each other, occupying about the tenth part of the moon's circumference, their altitude being about the twentieth part of the lunar diameter. The protuberance in the middle diminished in height towards the end of the eclipse, the phenomenon having first become visible soon after the totality had ceased. This extraordinary observation was published at the time, and set down for an optical illusion; but, after a lapse of three months and a half, Dr. Montecchi has suggested to the academy of sciences that there might be something in it after all; and, if so, that it would turn out to be one of the most wonderful on record. Answering various objections which have been made, he reasons thus:

"It is true that M. D. Craty is the only one who witnessed the phenomenon, but he was also the only one whose eyes were fresh, he having been precluded from fatiguing them by the clouds which screened the eclipse from view until after the totality. Moreover, the other observers, as soon as they had ascertained all they wanted about the protuberances, became careless, and did not watch the emergence with the same care that they had bestowed upon the immersion. Hence it may easily be conceived that they overlooked faint lunar protuberances they did not expect. This being conceded, the phenomenon itself may be explained by the occurrence of a volcanic eruption on the posterior hemisphere of the moon, which we can never see. The smoke or ash would rise to an enormous height, owing to the extremity of the moon's atmosphere, which, therefore, could offer but very slight resistance; for the same and other reasons of a mechanical nature, the columns of eruptive matter would be lance-shaped, and not have the form of a mushroom, as is the case in terrestrial eruptions. The observer may therefore just have seen the tops of three such columns issuing from craters concealed from view. At a distance of five degrees from the lunar border a crater eighteen thousand feet high would be out of sight, and just grazed by the visual ray. In this case, the three craters are supposed to have been close together, and connected with each other. If this explanation be correct, we possess in M. D. Craty's observation the first tidings of a world we shall never see."

Steam Carriages for Common Roads.

On Saturday afternoon a very remarkable sight was seen in this city. A train of heavily laden coal wagons, looking exactly like a luggage train, was observed coming steadily up the steep incline leading into Edinburgh. It was one of Mr. R. W. Thompson's patent road steamers with india rubber wheel tires, having four huge loaded wagons in tow. The total weight of the load was forty tons. The road steamer had drawn the train from Newbattle collieries, eight miles from Edinburgh, over a very hilly road with rising gradients of one in sixteen. The hill from P.W. Burn up to Miron St. is both long and steep, but the road steamer drew its train to the top with the most perfect ease. In the outskirts of the city, where the roads are macadamized, there were many places where broken stones had just been spread on the surface. Over these sharp loose stones the india rubber tires of the road steamer passed without crushing, or in fact disturbing them in the least. The roughest and sharpest bed of broken stones sank gently into the elastic cushion of India rubber, which rose from the contact with the most jagged fragments of stone without any trace or mark of injury. The perfect command which the conductors of the train had over its movements enabled them to control both its course and speed with the utmost precision. The line of streets through which it passed a few days ago the most crowded streets in the city, but, notwithstanding all these obstacles, aggravated by the streets being at some points under repair and closed for one half their width, no difficulty was experienced in steering clear of every impediment. This invention seems to remove all obstacles to the use of steam on common roads.—The Scotsman.

Too Much Land.—We know a farmer who ten years ago owned 150 acres of land, and was doing well; he now owns 500 acres, and is worse off than before. And why? Because this large farm is a great bill of expense laid upon him; he cannot afford to keep it in good condition, and it hangs a millstone of care about his neck. His wife and children, his sons and daughters, are obliged to work hard to keep the great machine running.

We presume his boys declare they will leave home as soon as they are old enough; and the girls say they will before they will marry farmers. Neither sons nor daughters are educated as they deserve to be; they cannot be spared from the farm work on this big farm.

Now we declare that such a farm is a curse to its possessor and his family, and an injury to the whole agricultural interests. If that man wants to save himself and his household, he should sell at least one-half of his land, improve the remainder to make it more productive, release his children from bondage, and try to make his home a comfort. He will live longer, lay up as good a property, and will train up a more intelligent and a happy family.—American Agriculturist.

Story of the late Governor Tod of Ohio.

In the fall of 1863, having some business with governor Tod, in regard to recruiting, I, in company with other privates and non-commissioned officers called upon him at Columbus. I had never before seen him. On entering the room he bowed politely, and motioned us to seats. At the time there were several colonels, majors, and other officers present. The governor walked from one to the other, briefly but kindly attending to the business each had to present. Now he would be talking to a private. The same courtesy marked his demeanor to both. Presently the door swung open and a tall, fine-looking officer, dressed in military style, with his blue cap thrown back, and his sword dangling at his side, strode in, and swept grandly up to the governor while he was talking to me and another private. The officer looked down with marked and manifest contempt upon our plain blouses. Not so the governor, however, as we shall see.

Governor, said he a la Napoleon, do you recollect me?

Yes, answered the governor dryly, I remember you perfectly well, and smile contemptuously.

Well, sir, continued the airy officer, has my commission been made out yet.

The governor turned upon him such a look as I can never forget, and answered his question by asking the most stinging question that could be addressed to a soldier in those critical times:

Why are you not with your regiment? It will be time enough for you to ask promotion when you return to your duty in the field, sir.

At this the windy and swollen politician whined something about being too sick to travel, and growled out something about being overlooked for long on the list of promotion, and intimated that the governor had not done him justice.

Promote you, sir! you are a coward, and do not deserve it. I know you too well. You ought to be cashiered and dismissed in disgrace, and, if you do not soon report at the front, I will see that you are dismissed. Go, sir; I want to see no more of you. There are forty thousand men from Ohio, better men than you, at the front to-day bearing muskets.

The fellow left, the governor smiled, while the boys cheered and laughed until the room echoed with the applause of the privates of the army.—A Late Army Officer.

REACTION IN THE SHEEP TRADE.

As certainly as the sunrise always follows the setting of that luminary, so surely will there be a rise in the price of sheep ere long, and in all probability it will be a steady and lasting one—at least it will only vary with the rise and fall of other agricultural productions. City people have commenced to use mutton to vary with beef and pork, so that the demand will be regular and lasting, as butchers will feel compelled always to have some on hand, and those who supply the best families must have a good quality; consequently, mutton sheep, as they are sometimes called, will be in request.

This is the time for the long-headed men to consider the subject and take advantage of the low price of store sheep, for besides the demand for supplying the regular market, there is beginning to be felt a conviction among enlightened men that sheep are really necessary on farms of respectable dimensions, to assist in keeping up the fertility of the soil, which knowledge will soon make good flocks the rule instead of the exception, as is the case through the country now.—Cor. County Gentleman.

Postal Money Order System.

We publish the following instructions to persons wishing to remit money through the postoffice, copied from the money-order regulation of postmaster general:

The money order system is intended to promote public convenience and to insure safety in the transfer through the mails of small sums of money. The mode by which safety is secured consists in leaving out of the order the name of the payee or party for whom the money is intended. In this respect a money order differs from an ordinary bank draft or check. An advice or notification, containing full particulars of the order is transmitted by the issuing postmaster to the postmaster at the office of payment. The latter is thus furnished, before the order is sent, with the necessary information to detect fraud, if any should be attempted.

Rates of commission charged on money orders:

On orders not exceeding $20	10 cts.
Over $20 and not exceeding $30	15 cts.
Over $30 and not exceeding $40	20 cts.
Over $40 and not exceeding $50	25 cts.

No fractions of cents to be introduced in an order. United States treasury notes or national bank notes only received or paid.

A New York telegram of the 28th says: A long letter from Gen. Longstreet is published, wherein he ridicules the idea that Gen. Grant will become a democrat, and says, "I regard his past course and decided character as the surest guarantee of his future course. His antecedents clearly mark him as a national man, and as such he gives assurance of adhesion to the party whose basis is the union, and the influence of his administration will be applied to its complete and prosperous restoration." He tells the southern people that all that is required for perfect peace is hearty co-operation in congressional reconstruction.

Extraordinary Musical Demonstration.

The most stupendous musical gathering of the present age, will take place on Boston Common, commencing Tuesday, June 15th and continuing four days. It is styled the Great National Peace Jubilee. There will be a temporary building erected, which will cover an area of ground 500 by 300 feet, and is to hold 50,000, 800,000 feet of lumber will be required in its construction. Chairs will be provided for the whole audience. The roof will be partly of wood and partly of canvas. It is called the Coliseum and will be about the only building of modern times which ever approached that famous Roman structure. The band will consist of one thousand performers. P. S. Gilmore of the band of that name will act as leader. Twenty thousand singers are to furnish the chorus. The programme will open with Hail Columbia, by the band and chorus. A novel and astonishing accompaniment to this will be the firing of cannon and musketry, and the chiming of all the bells of the city, by telegraph or electricity, all in exact time with the music.

This is one of the grandest and boldest ideas ever conceived in the musical world, and there is not the slightest doubt but that it will be carried through.—Lawrence Mass. American.

John B. Gough tells this story: In one of the quiet towns of Massachusetts a young lady, who had an accomplished education and all the charms of modest beauty and intellect, went to a rain-soaked, who was daily enticing her father to drink, intending so to possess his snug little farm. She told him he was not only destroying her father, but bringing ruin and disgrace on her and her mother. O, he said, she would soon be married; she not trouble herself. She replied she never should; she should never consent to involve in their shame one that she loved; she would never leave her mother. She would work with her own hands, and every day bring him the amount of money he now received of her father, if he would sell him no more. She entreated him with tears. With an infernal leer, he asked the girl if she should say to her father that she had requested him to sell him no more. Her eye flashed and reason reeled. "You are not a man," said she. She is now a maniac in the Worcester Asylum.

A pious old clergyman, while sending his way to church one Sunday morning saw the two sons of one of his parishioners, going into the woods, evidently for the purpose of hunting. Feeling certain that anything like direct remonstrance with the young gentlemen themselves would scarcely turn them from their ways, he waited until after preaching, and sought the old gentleman, their father. After recounting the circumstances of meeting Billy and Sammy as he had done, he closed an affecting appeal by inquiring of their father why they had not been brought up in the fear of the Lord?

"Fear of the Lord, parson—fear of the Lord! Why they hev! They're so feared of him now they dassent go out on Sunday without double-barrelled shot guns on their shoulders."

Philadelphia ships about one half of the petroleum sent abroad from the United States. Pittsburgh is the principal market for this article west of the Alleghenies. From January 1st to November 14th of the past year, Philadelphia exported 33,665,224 gallons of petroleum. In the same period the exports from Boston amounted to 2,267,517, and from Portland, 580,400 gallons. During the same period in 1887, the exports from Philadelphia to foreign ports were 35,621,005 gallons, showing an increase this year of upward of 8,000,000.

Mr. Weed writes a letter from Charleston, S. C., in which he says: "Young men of cultivation and refinement, who once supposed that the Divine injunction relating to the sweat of the brow was applicable only to the colored race, are now eagerly seeking employment, however laborious, to maintain themselves, while their mothers and sisters, with equal alacrity avail themselves of every occupation suitable to their sex and character. The intelligent and civil conductor of a street car in which we were riding, is a grandson of the late Episcopal Bishop Bowen, whose family before the war was wealthy."

John Chinaman in California is clear headed at a bargain. His ideas of the credit system are extremely safe, tho' rather vague. A merchant of unbounded credit in San Francisco recently applied to a Chinese merchant, through his agent, to purchase a cargo of rice on time. The agent soon set forth the opulence, standing &c., of his principal, to which Chinaman replied: "Yes, him welly good man. Me trust ee, him pay me one half cash-ee, other half when me deliver rice ee."

The war department has issued an order forbidding the hard riding of army horses except in cases of necessity. This order, with perfect truth, alleges that "galloping soon breaks them down." Secretary Schott will be overwhelmed with equine gratitude for this, if horses have souls, and certainly with the gratitude of all men who are moved by a feeling for the sufferings of our poor dumb brothers. As horses do not vote, we suppose there is no political meaning to this order.

The Boston Transcript makes the following practical application of A. Johnson's plan for paying (2) the national debt: Mr. Johnson's salary is $25,000 a year. We think it would be a bad idea to pay it in a treasury bond for that amount, on interest due in seventeen years, with the provision that the interest as it accrues be deducted from the principal, instead of being paid to Mr. Johnson.
